Michael Hingson is an internationally acclaimed public speaker and consultant who uses his personal stories and experiences escaping from and surviving the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001 as the backdrop for his talks on the life lessons he has learned growing up in a world different from what most of us experience. Michael, blind since birth, survived the 9/11 attacks with the help of his guide dog Roselle. Since that day, Michael has been in constant demand by meeting planners, companies, associations, and organizations of all sizes to speak at their events, and called on regularly to use his expertise as a person who is blind, to consult with different groups and the media on subjects related to technology, diversity and inclusion.
